Is it Worth While?

The following carnest and tender poem is taken from Joaquin Miller's new volume called "Bongs of the Sun Lands," and is classed among those entitled "Falling Leaves."

- Is it worth while to jostle a brother Bearing his load on the rough road of life? Is it worth while that we jeer at each other in blackness of heart?-that we war to the knife?
- God pity as all in our pitiful strife ! God pity us all as we justle each other-God pardon us all for the triumph we feel
- When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on the heather, Pierced to the heart; words are kerner than steel. And mightler far for wee or for went.
- Were it not well, in this brief little journey On over the lathmus, down into the tide, We give him a fish instead of a serpent, Ere folding the hands to be and abide Forever and aye in dust at his side?
- Look at the roses saluting each other; Look at the herds all in peace on the plain : Man, and man only, makes war on his brother. And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain; Shamed by the beasts that go down on the plain.
- to it worth while that we battle to humble Home poor fellow soldier down into the dust / God pity us all ! Time eftsoon will tumble All of us together, like leaves in a gust, Mumbled Indeed down into the dust.

VARIETY.

A Boston gentleman says whisky is good for a cold on the lungs, and it needn't be a very bad cold, either.

Next to street preaching there is no employment which yields so little return as winking at a pretty girl through a pair of goggles.

A little boy has been fairly driven from a Slawson school by the disgraceful persecution of the other scholars, who taunted him with the fact that his father had been a New York juryman. From a very ancient tombstone in Scotland:

John Carnagic lies here; Descended from Adam and Eve; If any can boast of a pedigree higher, He will willingly give them leave. A large plaid child in Rochester has lost her sack, according to an advertisement. Why a piaid child, of the large pattern in particular, should require a sack, the advertisement does not say. But it teaches us to beware of vanities. But it teaches us to beware of vanities. WASTED AWAY .- Under a big walnut tree in the far corner of a Mississippi graveyard is found thus: Here's what remains of William Jones, He wasted away to nothing but bones, When he died. When the frumpet sounds in thunder tones, Not being in flesh, he must walk in bones, Or else Bide.

The pan-cake season has got around to Richmond, Indiana. A hired girl employed in a family there, while baking cakes the other morning, stepped backward to a chair in which reposed the batter, and deliberately sat down in the pan. As she subsequently refused to sit down on the stove, the breakfast was finished with bread.

Brigham Young's one hundred and seventeen children have been learning to sing "Father, dear father, come home," one singing the solo, while the other one hundred and sixteen join in the chorus, until each one has successively given a tug at their father's domestic affections. The chorus tears Brigham's tender vitals to flinders.

A very prudent man in Danbury provides himself with an extra hat for the month of Nevemher. He carries it in his coat-tail pocket, and when the wind lifts the one from his head he straightway jams on the other, then puts after the other, and thus not only saves chaffing from the unregenerate, but actually gets credit as a philanthropist-the general impression being that he is in pursuit of somebody else's hat.

The school girls are wearing secret bows. This is important. The bows are made of worsted, and are of several colors. Each color denotes a secret, and when you see several little girls wearing any one color you may know thereby that they all hold one secret, and are in a great deal of pain in consequence. Some of them wear two or three colors in one bow, and it is safe to affirm that the wearer is bowed down by that number of secrets. Very effeminate-looking girls rarely get above one color, but the more masculine frequently reach two and three, and even four colors. A little girl with four colors in her bow keeps herself very secluded, and looks as solemn as if she had just received a summons to die, and was only waiting for her winter bat to do it.

CHALK-MARK PARTITIONS.—A lady traveling in the far West writes home as follows: The hotels of these sections are built of logs, and are generally fifteen feet in size. They have but one room which answers for hall, drawing-room, dressing-room and kitchen. It having been the first time I ever had the extreme felicity of registering my name on the book of one of these metropolitan accommodations, I was much surprised by the arrangements. I observed a few men changing their clothes-or more properly performing their toilet-and I addressed the landlord with:

"Is this the only apartment this house has?" "Yes, ma'am; isr.'t dat enough?" "But haven't you got any other for ladies?"

"What a horrible arrangement! But, how do the ladies do?" They draw a chalk mark around their bed, and while dey take off dere clothes an' tings, no gen'leman is 'lowed to look ober de white mark?"

Thomas Briggs, of Detroit, has a boy baby, about ten months old, who is admitted at the beginning of this article to look just like his father. and to be the smartest baby boy of his age in De-troit. The other morning the child was sitting on the floor, playing with five or six coal buttons on a string, and taking an occasional nibble at an apple to bring out his first crop of teeth. Mrs. Briggs and a neighbor were talking away, as only women can gossip, when the baby hid the buttons under a mat and started to finish the apple. A bit of skin got in his throat, and he gave a cough and a whoop, and pawed the air and rolled over | Thousands of Families now using this Lamp testify

"Oh, them buttons! He has swallowed them buttons" cried the mother, as she yanked him up and shook him. "Pound him on the back!" yelled the other woman, trying to hold his legs still "Run for the neighbors!" cried Mrs. Briggs. "Oh, he'il die! he'll die!" screamed the other, as she ran out. And the neighbors came in, and made him lay on his stomach, and cough, and then turned him on his back, and rubbed his stomach, and jogged him about all sorts of ways, until he got mad, and went to howling. Then the boy ran for Briggs, and Briggs ran for the doctor, and the doctor came and choked the baby, and ordered sweet oil and a mustard plaster, and told them to hold him on his back. Everybody knew that those six buttons were lodged in the baby's throat, because he was red in the face, and because he strangled as he howled and wept. They poured down sweet oil, and put mustard across him, and wept over him, and his mother said she could never forgive herself.

Boys drove by, calling: "Slab wood for sale!" and the seissors man went by shouting: "Sharp! sharp "" but that distressed crowd held the baby down, and shed their tears over his whole length.

The doctor was looking serious, and Briggs was thinking that he hadn't done anything to deserve such a blow, when one of the women pushed the mat, and discovered the buttons. Then everybody laughed, and danced, and they kicked the sweet oil bottle under the bed, threw the mustard plaster at the doctor, and Mrs. Briggs hugged the howling angel to her bosom, and called him her "wopey topsy hopsy dropsy dopsy little cherub."
